

Join the troops!

National Historic Landmark Fort Mifflin is looking to “enlist” some new members of our interpretive staff! Our friendly team works a flexible schedule of irregular hours (including daytime, weekend and evening hours) based on our program calendar. This is a great “side gig” for a history lover.

You must have some public engagement or tour guiding experience, love history, be a flexible team player and willing to work outdoors in a variety of weather conditions. You will regularly be walking over uneven terrain and may need to lift and carry up to 40 pounds. Proficiency in a heritage skill suitable for demonstration is a plus.

This position has irregular hours (some weekday and weekend daytime, some nights.) There will be opportunities to serve as our Night Time Host for Scout camping, paranormal investigations and site rentals. Paid training.

Fort Mifflin is home of some of the most immersive living history programming in Philadelphia, presenting events and public programs spanning the 18th through the 20th century. Help us expand our capabilities by bringing your unique skills to the garrison.

If you are interested, send your resume attached to an email telling us why you think this would be the most awesome job ever. Emails go to FortMifflinInfo@gmail.com with the subject “I want to join the troops!”

This photo features Lead Interpretive Guide Connor Duffy firing our Revolutionary War field cannon – you can learn how to safely do this, too. Have a blast at your new job!
